

Iterated soft-drop multiplicity of the same hemispheres, in fixed  $(W, Q)$  cells across the three beam configurations. Computed from colour-frame momenta it is constant to about one percent; computed in the lab it falls by up to an order of magnitude over the same cells.  $n_{SD}$  is the safer observable theoretically and the more frame-fragile one experimentally, because its angular cut is a laboratory angle.