

The same object with $Q = 5-7.5 \text{ GeV}$ held fixed. The slices with most of the current system's energy flatten (a few percent); the low-energy slices keep a residual rise. Within a fixed (E_{cm}, Q) cell the lab momentum has little room left to vary, and what varies is the share of W the hemisphere carries.